ABSTRACT:

Youth Health Service, Inc. will replicate, with rural families, the core elements of a demonstrated effective program, The Family Connections Program of Baltimore, Maryland. Core interventions to be replicated are: 1) home-based family prevention interventions by professional social workers, 2) emergency assistance, 3) social support services including parenting education and parent-child interaction group services, and 4) advocacy and community collaboration. There are two main themes of the project's evaluation: 1) client compliance using survival analysis, and 2) change in risk factors, protective factors and maltreatment outcomes such as care giver's depressive symptoms, alcohol use, drug use, functioning, parenting stress, parent attitudes toward change, parenting attitudes, parenting competence, level of perceived social support, family functioning, and various measures of child safety and child well-being.
