ABSTRACT:

Cook Inlet Tribal Council, Inc. (CITC) proposes Healthy Homes Father Involvement Enhancement, a project to improve child and family well-being by increasing fathers' positive involvement in their children's lives. Clients will be referred through CITC's Welfare-to-Work case management program for Native TANF recipients in the Municipality of Anchorage. The project will provide state-of-the-art fatherhood involvement training to staff to effectively engage fathers and will intervene early in the lives of at-risk Native children and their families to help prevent child abuse. Anticipated outcomes are: increased father/child contact; improved parenting skills; improved quality of father/child interactions; involvement of father in child's basic care; and improvement of the mother/father co-parenting relationship. Project services include staff training; mental health assessments; intensive case management; home visits; transportation; fathers' parenting classes; fathers' support groups; and supervised visitation.
