ABSTRACT:

The National Abandoned Infants Assistance (AIA) Resource Center, operating for 11 years at the University of California at Berkeley's School of Social Welfare, supports professionals to work effectively with families and infants who are abandoned or at-risk of abandonment due to prenatal substance abuse. The Center will: (1) provide training and technical assistance to AIA staff, state and federal agencies, and other practitioners; (2) generate and disseminate knowledge about lessons learned and best practices; and (3) track, analyze, and report on the evaluation outcomes of AIA demonstration projects. The Center will: assess the training needs of the AIA projects; update our database of trainers/experts; conduct individualized searches for specialized trainers; administer a training find; and host annual telephone seminars, telephone roundtables, annual AIA Grantees' Conferences, and annual national symposiums. The Center will also disseminate information on lessons learned and innovative practices through our newsletter, fact sheets, issue papers, and on our Web site.
